

Transition of care for people with intellectual disability

About Easy Read

Easier words with pictures to help explain some ideas.

Going to a new health service - transition of care

A doctor speaking with a patient.

A transition of care is when you see a new service or person about your health.

For example, you might start going to a new GP.

This guide says what to do when you have a transition of care.

The guide says how to plan for the change of health services.

It shares ideas about how to ask for what you need.

A transition of care means that some or all of your health care is moved to a new service or person. For example, you might start going to a new GP.

This Easy Read guide says what to do when you have a transition of care.

The guide says that when you go to a new health service, the new service needs information about:

- the support you need for your disability

- family, carers and other people who may support you with your health
- how you feel in your mind and body
- how you communicate.

The guide says how to plan for the change of health services. It shares ideas about how to ask for what you need.

We trust this resource

We trust this resource because it is:

- Made to help, not for profit
- Made by people who know a lot about the topic
- Made in Australia

We've checked this resource, and you can follow our guide to know if health information is true and right for you.

This resource was made by

Australian Commission on Safety and Quality in Health Care

The Commission leads and coordinates national improvements in the safety and quality of health care in Australia. It is part of the Health portfolio of the Australian Government.

- Visit website